WENDY'S ROOM

The curtain opens to reveal a children's room with a window in the middle. On one bed, Wendy is reading a pirate story to her brother, John.

Wendy: Once upon a time there was a pirate called Hook, everybody called him Hook because he had a hook instead of one of his hands. Hook wanted to defeat Peter Pan because he was his enemy.

Wendy takes a coat hanger in one hand to act as a hook and a wooden sword in the other.

John: On Guard, Captain Hook!

John grabs another sword and stands up.

Wendy: I'm not afraid of you, Peter Pan.

John: Me neither.

Wendy: Take this, I'll teach you a lesson.

John: Ha, ha, ha. You will never catch me.

Wendy: Give me my treasure.

John: Never. The gold watch is mine.

Wendy: Take this!

John: Oh!

The father enters into the room looking for his gold watch.

Father: Kids! (The children are playing and the father continues looking for his watch.) Kids! (They are not listening to him) John! Wendy! Stop it.

Wendy and John: Hello Dad!

Father: Stop fighting! Okay guys, where is my gold watch?

Wendy and John: The treasure!

Father: Your treasure? Come on! Kids, where is my watch?

The children return the watch to their father.

Wendy: Sorry Dad, here it is.

Father: John!

John: We were playing at Pirates and the watch was our treasure.

Father: Playing Peter Hook and Captain Pan again?

John and Wendy start laughing.

Wendy: No, Dad. It's Captain Hook

John: And Peter Pan!

Father: Whatever! (The father sees the book of short stories by Wendy, catch it and looking at Wendy) Wendy, are you reading pirate tales again?

John continues playing pirates with his sword

Wendy: (Lowering her head) Yes...

John is stabbed with a sword and begins to cry.

The father puts the book in one bed and grabs John's arm.

Father: Don't you understand? Your brother is too small for a pirate tales.

Wendy: But Dad, it's not fair. I love to read stories! Please!

Father: Wendy, You are a grown up now. You are going to have to sleep in your own room. Good night.
